GOLDA MEIR

Foreign minister of Israel, was given an official reception in Ottawa by Prime Minister Diefenbaker and External Affairs Minister Green.

GOLDA MEIR IN TORONTO SUNDAY

WILL ADDRESS CANADIAN JEWRY AT BETH TZEDEC

A National Leadership brunch for chairmen and committee members of State of Israel Bond Campaigns throughout Canada is being convened by Samuel Bronfman, National President and D. Lou Harris, National Chairman of the State of Israel Bond Organization of Canada, on Sunday, December 2nd at 12 o'clock noon in Toronto's Beth Tzedec Synagogue.

Golda Meir, Israel's Minister for Foreign Affairs, will be the guest speaker and will discuss top level matters pertaining to the present situation in the young democracy.

In announcing the Leadership session, Messrs. Bronfman and Harris expressed the hope that representatives from communities throughout the country will come to Toronto to hear the first-hand message of Mrs. Meir. Israel Bond Chairmen and other leaders of other Jewish organizations in Canada are being invited to participate in this gathering. Although Mrs. Meir visits Ottawa and Montreal in addition to Toronto, her appearance in Toronto will be the only occasion she will have to meet with the top officials of Israel Bond Campaigns from across Canada.

RECORD ATTENDANCE FORESEEN

"The spontaneous response which has resulted from the first announcement that Golda Meir will address the Jewish Community of Toronto on Sunday, December 2 has exceeded all expectations, "stated Lawrence Shankman, Chairman of the Toronto Israel Bond Organization which is sponsoring the historic event.

Requests for invitations to attend the "Convocation of Israel Bond Holders of 1962" at Beth Tzedec are pouring into the Bond Office by the hundreds, and are being processed as quickly as possible. All Jewish organizations and groups are mobilizing their membership so that each may be represented at the tribute to Israel's Foreign Minister, in the largest possible numbers.

Because seating is limited to 2500 persons, it is possible to allocate only ONE invitation for each paid-up Bond purchaser in the 1962 campaign, with a limit of TWO tickets per family. Cash collection committees have gone into action in the final days before Mrs. Meir's visit, in order that as many Bond committors as possible be eligible to receive their tickets in time.

"By joining in Toronto's celebration of Her Excellency Golda Meir's visit, and by purchasing State of Israel Bonds in her honor, we will not only pay homage to one of the greatest women of our time, but we will also share in the continued growth of an Israel dedicated to peace, progress and enlightenment," Mr. Shankman stated.

Leading participants at the Convocation will be His Excellency Yaacov Herzog, Ambassador of Israel to Canada; Mr. Shankman, Chairman; Mrs. Morris Zweig, representing the Women's Division of the Toronto Bond Organization; and Mr. John R. Devor, Chairman of the Board of Governors.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS

By RAY GOULD

USSR CHANGES JEWISH POLICY

(Copyright The Canadian Jewish News, 1962)

With a suddenness characteristic of Soviet policy the Soviet Union surprised the world by appointing Benjamin E. Dymshits, a deputy premier, the economic czar of the entire empire. Mr. Dymshits, who became Saturday the head of the powerful Economic Council of the U.S.S.R., is fifty-two years old. He was born in a Jewish colony in the Crimea and was brought up in a Jewish school. He is the Soviet Union's most prominent capital investment expert.

JEWISH SITUATION IMPROVED

Although a Jew, Lazar M. Kaganovitch, had also been on the highest echelon of government as Stalin's deputy premier during the sinister days of the latter's regime, diplomatic sources told The Canadian Jewish News this week that, as far as the appointment of Dymshits and the atmosphere surrounding the Soviet Jews are concerned, it absolutely is not to be compared with the Stalin era. (Reliable informants and experts on Soviet problems told The Canadian Jewish News correspondents stationed in several capitals that the "thaw" has definitely reached the level of the Soviet Jewish population).

To a question posed by our correspondents in Paris, Jerusalem and Washington, the following points of interest have been made in relation to the Soviet change in its Jewish policy:

- The appointment of Dymshits is a result of the general liberalization of the government's policies since Cuba. It is noted that the trend in Moscow is towards closer co-operation with the West, especially with the United States.
- When Mr. Dymshits was first appointed deputy premier last July, the thaw had not yet affected the Jewish population.
- According to the best sources available, the evolution in Russia towards full economic equality and opportunity for Jewish citizens may be "on the road." It will be part and parcel of a new policy of rapprochement with the United States. It may, too, eliminate discriminations practised in the past at universities and in certain areas of endeavour. The fact that a Jew has been appointed "economic czar" following the recent over-publicized trials against "Jewish speculators" in such traditionally anti-Semitic areas as the Ukraine and Bessarabia will not fail to sound as a warning to over-zealous, anti-Jewish editors in eastern Galicia and in the former Roumanian province of Bessarabia.

GENERAL RELIEF

Well-informed sources in contact with foreign diplomats stationed in Russia report:

A. The appointment of Dymshits has created a feeling of relief among Soviet Jewry where the recent economic trials against "Jewish swindlers" had caused great fear.

B. However, the same sources caution against optimism in the field of Soviet tolerance towards the Jewish religion and Jewish culture in all expressions. They point to the editorial in which the official Moscow News this week stated that Soviet citizens of Jewish nationality are dropping slowly their interest in Jewish religion. This newspaper also stated that only 2,268,000 Jews in the Soviet Union have officially declared their "Jewish nationality."

C. The Soviet News, of course, did not elaborate that many hundreds of thousands of Jews in the Soviet Union have tried during the last years to change their "nationality" on the passports so that they may escape discrimination, harassment or persecution.

D. Simultaneously, with the relaxation of the anti-Jewish policy in some Soviet ruling circles, a general liberalization is reported since Cuba, and it is being applied with a rocket tempo. For example, it is reported that, following Mr. Khrushchev's most recent blast against Stalin's policy of murder and oppression, the Russian liberal writers and intellectuals have wrested the control from the old Stalinist leaders in the Soviet literary field. Alexander T. Tvardovsky has become together with Yevtushenko, the leader of the powerful and influential Soviet world of arts and letters. Yevgeny Yevtushenko, the famous author of Babi Yar (the poem against anti-Semitism), has published, on October 21st, a new poem warning against a resurrection of Stalinism. The poem is entitled, characteristically, Stalin's Heirs.

E. Despite all these optimistic reports about the new trend in the Soviet Union — full economic equality for Jews—observers state that there is no noticeable relaxation in the policy of the Soviet government against the development of Jewish religion and Jewish culture. However, it is stressed that the general tendency of rapprochement with the West creates an opportunity for opening negotiations with the Soviet Union on the future of Judaism in Russia.

Jewish Deputy Premier of the Soviet Union whose appointment as Economic Czar of Russia has created an international sensation.

BUNDESTAG PRESIDENT IN ISRAEL

JERUSALEM (JCNS) — Dr. Eugen Gerstenmaier, President of the West German Bundestag, and Mrs. Gerstenmaier arrived in Israel last week. Dr. Gerstenmaier had an hour's conversation with the Prime Minister.

Mr. Ben-Gurion avoided any reference to present political developments in West Germany, and particularly to the younger generation. Instead, he told Dr. Gerstenmaier, who is a theologian, about the religious basis of the State of Israel, and of the religious significance of the ingathering of the exiles.

The German President was earlier received by President Ben-Zvi. Later in the day he met Mr. Moshe Sharett, following this with an hour and a half conversation with Professor Martin Buber.

Special police who were held in reserve as a precaution were found to be unnecessary. There was a small demonstration at Lydda airport staged by about 50 young members of Herut who marched wearing "Betar" uniforms and carrying banners with slogans such as: "Go back home and recall your German rocket experts from Egypt," and "We did not forget," in Hebrew and English.

Dr. Gerstenmaier and his wife are due to stay in Israel for eight days as official guests of the Reparations. They will remain a few days longer, unless the present political crisis in Germany forces them to return earlier.

UNIONS SECURE RABBIS' SALARIES

Jerusalem, (JCNS) An agreement reached Thursday between the Histadrut and the Ministry of Religious Affairs will for the first time regularise the position of rabbis and give them regular salaries. Hitherto Israeli rabbis had mere stipends, often only I£50 or I£100 monthly.

The new scales affecting rabbis in the suburbs, settlements and villages are between I£300 and I£400 monthly. Until now only the Dayanim, who came under the same regulations as judges of civil courts, were regularly paid.

A hitch occurred however over the appointment of new rabbis to fill several vacancies, especially in new settlements. Normally this is the task of the Chief Rabbinate Council, but its term of office expired three years ago with the expiration of the term of the Chief Rabbi. Although Chief Rabbi Nissim's position was regularised, no action was taken in respect of the Council, and the Minister of Religious Affairs sought to set up a specially convened committee for the purpose of filling the vacant posts. Chief Rabbi Nissim and the Council protested however at the Minister's attempt to by-pass them in the establishment of the committee and the matter has been shelved.

Equally no progress appears to have been made towards the election of Chief Rabbi (the post of Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi is still vacant), although the Minister of Religious Affairs drafted a new law some time ago which is still being dealt with in the Ministry of Justice.

EEC MEETS, TAKES UP ISRAEL'S MEMBERSHIP

Haifa, (JNCS) Israel's negotiators at the Common Market talks, which opened in Brussels on November 26, will ask for the setting up of a customs union between Israel and the European Economic Community, Mr. Michael Tsur, Director-General of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, stated here this week.

Such a union, he said, could be the cause of an industrial revolution in Israel in which the country's industrial and scientific potential would be fully developed. Textiles and the new petrochemical industries might be the ones to profit most, he thought.

Failure to secure such an agreement, Mr. Tsur said, might lead to the degeneration of Israel's economy. It would be impossible to base a modern industrial economy on a home market of just over 2,000,000 consumers, he believed.

a mother in israel: golda meir

"... Rachel weeps for her children".

The last time I heard Golda Meir speak was about two years ago at the United Nations when she "defended" Israel's violation of international law by capturing Eichmann. As I observed her from the press section, listened to her moving and subdued tone of speech and to the words streaming from the heart of this Jewish mother, I was confronted by the image of Rachel, the symbolic mother of martyred Israel. Though I listened to Golda, I hearkened to the lamenting voice of the Rebbe in Heder when he chanted the traditional melody about Rachel who "weeps for her children" in the far Diaspora, unprotected. And then I heard the consoling verse: "... And the children will return within their border (home)..."

* * * * *

Since Rachel of Old, from the time of biblical days, somehow every Jewish boy studying the Pentateuch sees in his phantasy the image of Rachel as a symbol of Jewish renaissance. When I was listening to Golda's defense of Israel's action regarding Eichmann, I closed my eyes and forthwith saw Rachel consoling her children. Although Israel's case before the Assembly of Nations had been a difficult one from the point of view of the letter of international law, after a few opening sentences Golda Meir turned from defender to prosecutor: she demanded reckoning from the civilized world; she presented her people's demands to a world which, in its cruel tolerance of Hitler's crimes, had been hiding behind the screen of legality. But, to a mother abstract legality cannot replace the heart. And Israel's Foreign Minister must have noted after that historic United Nations session that Rachel's message — the children are back within the borders of their home and they are determined that from Zion too justice shall be heard — had struck a note with the representatives of that body. It probably was one of the few occasions at East River when justice conquered diplomatic cynicism.

* * * *

Now Golda Meir is the official guest of Canada. As one who knows Prime Minister Diefenbaker from personal contact, I daresay that the Prime Minister, a deeply religious man who prides himself upon his biblical equation, will behold in her not only the representative of a friendly nation but also the biblical image of Mother Rachel proclaiming, urbi et orbi, the message and the blessing of her children returned to the promised land. It is no coincidence that, when Golda Meir became Israel's first ambassador to Moscow, tens of thousands of Jews crowded the streets surrounding the Embassy in order to see the Mother of Israel. Then Stalin (who, like every dictator, feared the Biblical image more than any army) began his persecution of Jews, followed by the Doctors' trials. (For Stalin understood correctly the message of Reborn Israel: the word of the Lord is eternally true.)

* * * *

In welcoming Golda Meir this week, Prime Minister Diefenbaker and External Affairs Minister Green realize, as does the majority of Canada's God-fearing people, that the power of Israel — its promise to a tormented humanity — does not depend upon the number of its armoured divisions and the perfection of its missiles, but in its message from the Holy City, the City of Peace. No political demagoguery will ever deter a Diefenbaker from looking up to Heaven for inspiration when considering the real significance of the miraculous rebirth of the State of Israel.

Toronto's Central Fund To Hold Annual Meeting

The Central Fund for Traditional Institutions of Toronto will hold its 5th Annual Meeting at 8.15 p.m. on Thursday, December 13th at the Associated Hebrew Schools, 3630 Bathurst Street. Co-chairmen, Meyer W. Gasner and Mark A. Levy announced that Rabbi Mordecai Kirshblum, one of the leaders of the American Jewish community, will be a special guest.

The evening will take the form of a reception in honour of Rabbi Mordecai Kirshblum, followed by a meeting at which time a report will be given on the progress of the Central Fund during the past year. The Central Fund for Traditional Institutions was initiated in Toronto in 1959 for the purposes of centralizing all fund-raising activities on behalf of traditional causes which formerly depended for their support on collections made by "meshulochim"; to distribute the proceeds of its annual campaign, raised from among supporters of traditional institutions, on a fair basis, taking into account the actual needs of each of the participating institutions, and to remit allocations directly to the beneficiaries rather than to intermediary collectors or fund-raising offices in New York.

It will be reported that Toronto's Central Fund program, the first of its kind to be created on the North American scene, has made significant strides in its four years. The number of participating institutions in Israel, France, England, U.S. and Canada has increased from 85 in 1959 to 113 in 1962. The number of annual subscribers has almost doubled over the past four years; the amounts remitted to beneficiaries will exceed $30,000 this year. The Co-Chairmen point out that each of the participating institutions has concluded an agreement with the Central Fund commiting themselves to cease all independent fund-raising in the city of Toronto. In this way, close of 120 separate campaigns have now been consolidated into one annual fund-raising effort under the direction of the Central Fund. The excellent development of this new concept of aid to traditional causes has won the admiration of all North American communities, and one major city (the community of Cleveland) has already created a similar program, which is about to complete its first year of successful operation. It is hoped, say the co-chairmen, that the encouraging report of Toronto's experiences in the past and the fine prospects for continued growth will result in the formation of Central Funds across the whole continent, to the mutual benefit of the institutions and the communities alike.

Reform Is Not Assimilation

Montreal, (CJN) "Jews are in danger of turning away from their environment and building walls of isolation around themselves." Dr. W. Gunther Plaut, Senior Rabbi of Holy Blossom Temple of Toronto, warned at the worship service of the Canadian Council of Reform Congregations first Biennial Convention here. "We are caught on the horns of a dilemma," he said. "The free society enables us to be Jews in the deepest, most intensive and loyal sense possible, but at the same time it demands of us to give equal energy to the needs of the total community. It is Reform Judaism's unique task to stress this total call on Jewish existence, to strike the balance between isolation and integration, to combine devotion to our faith and people with equally intense devotion to the cultural, civic and political development of Canada. Reform is neither parochialism nor assimilation. It is prophecy in modern garb. The prophets were Jews, but spoke of universal concerns. There is no Jewish justice, only justice; no Jewish peace, only peace for all men."

35 YEARS IN TORONTO

EXCLUSIVE FROM FRANCE Cassin at 75

DE GAULLE'S JEWISH FRIEND — GREAT JURIST

By Gerard Israel

On January 8, 1959 the attention of the entire French nation was focussed on the grand salon of the Elysee Palace. General Charles de Gaulle, who had just been elected President of the French Republic, was awaiting the solemn moment of his formal induction into office as First Magistrate of State.

At that historic moment there stepped forward the man upon whom devolved the task of performing the induction ceremony. The cameras of radio and television switched their attention onto a distinguished-looking white bearded personage attired in morning coat. He it was who read out the proclamation, mellowing its dry legal phrasing with an intonation elusively and melodiously evocative of the regions of the South.

Once again history had brought together General de Gaulle and President Rene Cassin. Already in 1940 fate had united them in London when it had fallen to their lot to bear aloft the torch of the Resistance. Cassin, then professor of law at Paris University, was strongly of the conviction that France must continue the fight, despite defeat, despite the German occupation, despite the apparent hopelessness of the situation. It was this which decided him to cross the Channel to place himself at the service of Free France.

How could this man, badly wounded in the First World War, a veteran of Verdun, the President of the French ex-Servicemen's Union have resigned himself to the defeat of France? As French representative at the League of Nations from 1924 to 1938 and firmly considering the use of force an affront to his innermost convictions, the triumph of Nazism in France furnished an additional reason to continue the fight. Thus it was that Rene Cassin became one of the very first followers of de Gaulle, who entrusted him with the portfolio of National Commissioner of Justice and Education.

And it was during the same testing period, brought with hope as well as despair, that President Cassin, a Jew of a Bayonne father and Alsatian mother, evinced fresh interest in his Coreligionists in Europe and the Mediterranean countries. General de Gaulle empowered him to take charge of the schools of the Alliance Israelite Universelle which, scattered throughout North Africa and the Near East, were doing their best to face up to the situation by continuing to kindle the flame of French culture and influence among the young Jews in a happier position than their co-religionists of the European Continent.

He accepted the General's commission with enthusiasm and embarked on a tour of the schools in the Levant, in the course of which he did much to encourage and stimulate their historic character as vehicles of Jewish tradition allied to French culture. And since 1943 he has held the office of President of the Alliance Israelite Universelle without a break.

On October 5, 1962, his 75th birthday, he can recall 22 momentous years which have borne him from a Paris occupied to a London seamed but heroic; from an Algiers at war to a Paris liberated. And he can also look back with pride to the moment when, immediately after victory, he was honoured with the title of Companion of Liberation by the Government of the Republic, which appointed him Vice-President of the Council of State and then entrusted him with the important task of representing France on the United Nations Commission of Human Rights. He played a leading role in the drafting of the Human Rights Universal Declaration.

As he celebrates his 75th birthday in the quietness and intimacy of his family circle, he will assuredly muse over the stirring events of the past and ponder deeply about the tasks ahead, tasks which will engage his acute and fertile legal mind in defending and guaranteeing the rights of man, in extending the range of education in the developing countries, and in shaping a new philosophy to harmonise the relations between the individual and society.

On this, his 75th birthday, we think of President Rene Samuel Cassin with deep affection and salute him as a universal champion, as an eminent jurist as a great Frenchman, and as a great Jew serving disinterestedly the most noble causes.

IN FRANCE

DE GAULLE'S VICTORY & THE JEWS

Two prominent Jewish personalities are among the Gaullist candidates elected during the French General Elections: M. Maurice Bokanowski, the Minister of Trade in the Cabinet of M. Pompidou, and M. Marcel Dassault, the aircraft producer of the famous "Mystères" and "Mirages" supersonic airplanes.

M. Bokanowski received 25,550 votes in his constituency in a Paris suburb (Bois Colombes) as against 10,880 given to his Communist opponent. M. Dassault was elected by 23,875 voters to the 7,238 given to his Socialist rival.

The neo-Fascist and Anti-Semitic Poujadist Movement which was represented in the old Parliament by about 50 members failed to get a single seat. Pierre Poujade himself suffered a "knock-out" defeat, obtaining less than 10 per cent of the votes in his electoral area.

Among the personalities eliminated in this first round of the elections was M. Pierre Mendès-France, the former Prime Minister. He was defeated by M. Jean de Broglie, the Minister of State and descendant of the famous ancient aristocratic de Broglie family, traditionally pro-Jewish and pro-Zionist.

De Gaulle's election victory has strengthened the stability of the regime. Simultaneously it gives French Jewry new hope for the development of a healthy Jewish community and a climate of freedom of religion.

Bishops', Schools

The recent demand of Ontario's Catholic bishops for more money for their separate schools and for a separate system right up to the end of high school has come smach in the middle of two very "live" controversies in both of which the Jewish community is closely immersed and which have clear implication for Ontario's Jewish parents, Schoolchildren and taxpayers.

ADVANCING ONE FAITH WITH TAX-MONIES

First comes the question of religious education in the public schools: on this issue the preponderant majority of Jews in this province take a similar stand — they oppose it. However it is interesting to note the gyrations and stances of the offialdom of the United Church of Canada. The United Church General Council has issued a statement denouncing the Catholic demands, a statement which says the following:

"The constitution of Canada sought to create a school system which was clearly open to all its citizens whether they were Roman Catholic or Protestant, Jew or Gentile and without prejudice to their race or social position. A very substantial number of Roman Catholic families continue to choose the public schools because they are truly 'public' ".

United Church representatives have also stated in reply to the Catholic demand that no public funds should be used to advance the position and doctrine of one faith.

All this sounds familiar. Where have we heard it before? Yes, from those arguing against religious instruction in the public schools. But do Messrs the Reverends Long, Sissons, and Mutchmore of the United Church oppose religious teaching in the public school as one would assume from the tenor and logic of their arguments against the Catholics? On the contrary they are its staunchest supporters. One of those who signed the United Church statement denouncing the Catholic Bishops is the author of the new Grade Eight text in religious (read Protestant) education — Dr Lewis Beattie.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE?

Isn't there some inconsistency in this support of the use of public funds to teach one religion in the public schools and the wish to deny public schools and the wish to deny public funds to teach a different religion in other schools.

Of course there is, but no doubt they will find an explanation that will extricate them from the uncomfortable corner into which they have nicely boxed themselves.

AID TO DAY SCHOOLS

The second issue involved is that of government money to religious or ethnic day schools. If the government grants the bishops' request for more money and for their own high schools how will this affect the demand which may come from some Jewish sources for subsidies to the Jewish day Schools? Will it ease the way of the further fragmentation of the public school system, will it only stiffen the resistance to it? And if the Catholic bishops are turned down will it shut the door to any concession at all to other School systems?

The two issues hang iin the balance.

Toronto Notes

● Richmond Street lawyer Edwin Pivnick is Forest Hill Village's new reeve. He was elected by acclamation to Lorie Simonsky's former post, there being no other claimant to the seat. Allan Perly had threatened to contest the reeveship but changed his mind at the last moment.

● Joseph B. Salsberg, is 60 years old.

● Newest member of the Upper Canada Law Society Benchers is Nathan Strauss Q.C. Mr. Strauss was runner-up in the law Society's elections a few years ago. The law Society is the regulatory body for all of Ontario's barristers. The new Bencher is a Ben Brith, a member of the Arbeter Ring, and assists the Refugee and Loan Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

● So far no one has publicly mentioned the ugly words "religious education" in the North York Board of Education campaign, though it is known to be a clear issue in the voting.

● Toronto's literary circles have taken cognizance of the coming visit to Toronto of Isaac Bashevis, Yiddish author, and have arranged a reception for him at the Bathurst Heights branch of the North York Libraries.

London Audience Turns Down School Religion

London, Ontario's Huron College was the scene of a lively public debate entitled "Resolved that Religious Education Should be Abolished in the Public Schools," whose final score ran 89—76 in favor of abolition.

Two visiting debaters from Toronto were featured: Alan Leal, dean of Osgoode Hall who spoke for the resolution, and the Rev. Denton Massey (of Bible class fame) who spoke against it. Perry Hill, a law student, and Mary-Ellen Kirk, a medical undergraduate, gave the dean a strong assist.

One amusing touch was when a prominent Anglican ecclesiastic left before the debate was over, he walked out through the ex't meant for "abolitionists" (to which his vote was counted) though he was cautioned before stepping out.

Discrimination

The newest issue of Human Relations is off the press. This is a small eight-page bulletin published by the anti-discrimination arm of the Ontario government. It contains an article by Steven Davidovich, entitled "Mutual — Key to Understanding" an analysis by Louis Fine of replies that came from Ontario industries in answer to 1,000 enquiries asking what they thought of the province's anti-discrimination laws, a report by Dr. Daniel G. Hill of his first five "busy and fruitful months" as full-time director of the Ontario Human Rights Commission. So far the active and aggressive director has made 20 public appearances, and has visited 16 Ontario centres to implement program or investigate cases.

One of the "boxes" in the bulletin is the following remark attributed to Sydney Harris: "A person who is going to commit an inhuman act invariably excuses himself by saying 'I'm only human, after all!' "

The publication is available from the Ontario Human Rights Commission, 8 York Street, Toronto.

Mr. Menzies: Calling The Pot Black

Alderman Menzies has kicked up a small flurry in Ward Five by accusing his aldermanic mate Joe Piccinini of injecting the race and religion issue into the campaign. The entire "injection" complained of is innocent enough, being merely a statement in Piccinini's campaign material that some day he may be Toronto's first mayor of Italian descent.

The item that provoked Mr. Menzies' protest is quite innocuous in comparison to something he himself perpetrated about ten years ago. Here is what he did then: Space was purchased in neighborhood weeklies, and blotters and throwaways were printed, with the heading "These are your candidates in Ward Five" listing the political party affiliation and religion of all candidates. Menzies made sure to list himself as "United Church" and two of his opponents as "Hebrew." The throwaways were delivered north of Bloor Street, then something of a demarkation line between the religious groups.

Eventually, of course, the device did not succeed. Of the two Jewish candidates, one [illegible] to the Board of Control, and the other is now in the Legislature.

IN MEMORIAM

TORONTO MOURNS THEM

Last week Toronto Jewry suffered the loss of three outstanding leaders: O. B. Roger, Joseph Zeifman, and Joseph Donnenfield.

● O. B. Roger, a product of Great Britain, a person completely at home in the highest circles, was a man who fully acknowledged and lived up to his responsibilities as a Jew. So fully was he accepted for his qualities of leadership and so keenly did he feel his obligations to all his fellow-Jews of whatever origin or background that within a few years after his arrival in Canada he was named president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, for the Ontario section, in the very crucial period of the re-organization of Congress — the critical pre-war days of the late 1930's. The Mount Sinai Hospital and its Florence Nightingale School of Nursing, the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, the Holy Blossom Synagogue — these organizations and the community as a whole are deeply indebted to him for his dedication.

● Joseph (Chaim=Yosef) Zeifman came from his native Stopnitz to Toronto as a young man and until his early death last week at 59 carried on the traditions and the way of life he knew in his Polish birthplace, transplanting them to the new environment. A truly humble and modest man, he faithfully served the Eitz-Chaim Talmud Torah, the Mizrachi movement, and the Torah V'avoda, and will long be remembered for his many benefactions.

● Joseph Donnefield who came from Roumania early in the new century lived to see his synagogue — the Adath Israel — reach its sixtieth birthday. He himself had been a member since before 1910 and was one of those who helped create its first building on Centre Avenue (The Elizabeth Street-Centre Avenue-Chestnut Street period of Toronto Jewish history is rapidly receding from our consciousness with the departure of these links with the past). A member of the pioneer generation who helped build our present community, he will be sadly missed.

CONFLICT OF LOYALTIES

SOUTH-AFRICAN JEWRY'S DILEMMA

The Israeli vote for sanctions against South Africa on the apartheid issue at the United Nations has naturally evoked the strictures of the South African Government and criticism of what it regards as "ingratitude" on Israel's part.

The facts must be accepted that South Africa was one of the first countries to recognise Israel, its then Prime Minister was the first Head of Government to visit Israel; it allowed Jews to send capital and gifts freely to Israel and regularly supported Israel diplomatically. The Jews of South Africa, too, are disturbed by the conflict which has arisen and their situation calls for understanding and sympathy.

Therefore it is to the credit of Premier Verwoerd that he has hastened to make it clear that South African Jewry could not be held responsible for the action of a foreign sovereign State. Moreover the influential "Star" of Johannesburg commented last week that "South African Jews are as much South Africans as he (Dr. Verwoerd) is, and have no control over the decisions of the Israeli Government."

As far as Israel is concerned, its delegation to the United Nations was undoubtedly faced with a dilemma by the vote. It was not merely a question of expressing the abhorrence of apartheid, which most Jews and indeed most civilised people wholeheartedly feel. To support the sanctions vote would unavoidably antagonise Jews and Gentiles in South Africa. Yet to abstain as most of the free world did, would not only have run counter to strong convictions of principle but would have disappointed Israel's Afro-Asian friends acquired with such great care and effort. The Israeli Government has the sole responsibility for making its own political decisions whether based on principal or on "raison d'état." The present situation is a reminder that these decisions, though necessarily determined by national interests often have an effect — and sometimes not a beneficial one — on the position of Jewish communities in the Diaspora.

BEHIND THE CURTAIN

THE "JEWISH TRIALS" IN RUSSIA

Of the 200,000,000 Soviet citizens, about 3,000,000 are Jews. According to Khruschev's recent statements on the Soviet economy, mismanagement and corruption are prevalent. However, when names of those guilty of economic crimes are published by the Soviet press, we find among them Jews only.

Here are excerpts from recent dispatches from Lemberg (Lvov), the capital of Eastern Galicia, now the Western Ukraine and other Soviet regions:

● An Ukrainian Jew, Chaim M. Kitaygorodsky, was sentenced to death by an Ukrainian Military Court in Lvov. Kitaygorodsky and several other Jews were charged with having bribed government officials. According to the "Lvovska Pravda" the trial lasted several days.

● Three other Jews were found guilty and were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. They are: S. G. Shkolmik, 15 years; L. P. Weizmann and P. M. Forman, 11 years each.

● A new mass trial of Jews — the second this winter — started this week before a Soviet military tribunal in Kishinev, the capital of Moldavia. Of some fifty persons before the court, forty have Jewish names, according to the list published in local official newspapers.

● Among them are twenty people described as "officials" of the State garment and shoe factories. Seventeen of them were employed as salesmen in State stores.

● All are accused of committing economic-offences, with emphasis on the embezzlement of money and goods. One official, whose name is given as Dr. S. Kreinetz and who is believed to have occupied a position in the local Jewish community for some time, is described as "the ringleader." He is accused of embezzling State funds and spending them on presents for his wife. He is said to have spent $15,000 on buying gold watches and fur coats.

● The official local press gives the trial much prominence, pointing to the accused as having been responsible for the various shortages experienced in the last few months in consumer and other goods.

As the trial takes place almost simultaneously with the meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee in Moscow, during which Khruschev bitterly denounced "corruption, extravagance and embezzlement" it is feared that the sentences may be very severe.

It is also interesting to note that these reports are published mostly in the local newspapers of the Ukraine and Bessarabia where anti-Semitism has been on the menu of all governments ruling these provinces: The Czar, the Ukranians, the Poles, the Rumanians.

In Geneva, Switzerland, the Bulletin of the International Commission of Jurists sees "Signs of racial overtones" in the Soviet prosecutions for economic offences and the application of the death penalty.

The Commission, a non-governmental organisation which has consultative status with the United Nations and which seeks to foster understanding of, and respect for, rule of law, declares that the "number of Jewish names found among those condemned to death is strikingly high, while there appear to be disproportionately high sentences passed on Jewish persons compared with others."

While the penal policy of a State is a matter for its domestic jurisdiction, it is subject to the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and to moral obligations arising from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Bulletin declares.

The "signs of racial overtones" in the present prosecutions, it is stated, "has given cause to very broad concern throughout the world."

BY YUVAL ELIZUR

ISRAEL'S ECONOMY AND THE COMMON MARKET

Describing to members of the Knesset the efforts made by Israel in the past several years to achieve a modus vivendi with the European Economic Community, the Minister of Finance did not sound over-optimistic about the immediate future. Predicting hard bargaining at the talks scheduled to begin in Brussels on November 26, Mr. Eshkol said that Israel's stand in negotiations with the EEC would have to be "flexible and dynamic".

Although the Israelis are trying not to be overconfident about the prospects of agreement with the Common Market, they do not disguise their satisfaction at the Council of Ministers' decision to open negotiations for a general trade and tariff agreement with Israel. Although Israel had been promised that its application would be considered at the September 24 meeting of the Council, there was reason to believe that the subject might not come up at all or that a decision would be postponed.

Not only the threats of the Arab states but selfish economic considerations, in addition to hesitations about becoming involved with concessions to a non-European state, could have delayed action on Israel's application. A further complicating factor lay in the long and difficult negotiations with the United Kingdom, as well as the applications of Switzerland, Denmark, Norway and other European states for full or associate members in the Common Market.

Precisely because of this long waiting line of candidates, Israel felt that it could not afford to lose any more time. The broadening of the framework of the Six is certain to make full agreement with Israel less attainable. Special concern in Israel arose over Spain's application for associate membership. If Spain, a citrus-producing country, is admitted to the Market before Israel's relations to the Six are defined any concessions on citrus exports will be difficult to obtain.

The unanimous decision of the Council of Ministers on September 24 (the Italian representative hesitated but voted with the other five) was therefore a distinct personal victory for Israel). The resolution was adopted as the result of instruction received from home by the Council's six ministers.

The economic prospects for Israel are, however, still in doubt. Israel spokesmen have not excluded the eventuality that negotiations at first will produce only meager results. Yet it is generally agreed in economic circles that any achievement in Brussels would be an improvement over the present situation.

At first Israel had hoped for associate membership in the EEC under Article 238 of the Treaty of Rome. Israel was told, however, to hold its application until negotiations with Greece were completed. However, when agreement with Greece was reached in the summer of 1961, Israel again was advised not to apply for associate membership.

It was then that the Israeli government decided to revise its tactics. Although a few experts still believe that Israel should press for nothing less than associate membership, the "flexible and dynamic" policy, as expressed by Mr. Eshkol, was adopted.

Having given up hope of association, Israeli officials strive now for a trade agreement covering more than 60 per cent of the trade between Israel and the Common Market, thus creating a free trade area between Israel and the EEC. Such an agreement, which would prevent discrimination against most items exported to the EEC, would also be acceptable to GATT, of which constitution provides for just such a free trade area in Israel is a member. GATT's Article 24 (5).

However, if a more limited agreement, affecting only a specific list of items, is reached, difficulties with GATT in Geneva may be unavoidable. Any concessions granted to Israel would have to be passed on, at least in theory, to all other members of GATT.

Although the possibility of reaching a broad agreement in the Brussels talks is not yet excluded, it is generally felt in Jerusalem that the EEC will offer to lower the external tariff on some of the items most crucial to Israel, such as citrus fruit, eggs and bromine. However, Israel has submitted a list of 150 items exported at present to the Six, which are already affected in varying degrees by the discriminatory practices of the EEC. An item-by-item discussion may prove to be too long and nerve-wracking. Moreover, in such negotiations Israel may encounter severe opposition on items important to its economy, such as textiles, which already have been hit by tariff discrimination.

Israel's hope, however, is that even if agreement on only a few items is reached in the first round of negotiations, permanent machinery for subsequent bargaining will be set up. This will obviate the necessity for initiating formal talks each time that another item is taken up. The importance attached by Israel to the Brussels talks is indicated by the appointment of Mr. Levi Eshkol, the Minister of Finance, to head the official delegation.

REPORT FROM ISRAEL

Toronto Mission Visits Israel

HAIFA, Israel (CJN Cable) — The Sixth Annual UJA Study Mission from Toronto, led by H. Wayne Tanenbaum, is in the midst of a busy schedule of intensive on-the-scene observations of Israel's accomplishments and continuing needs.

One of the most moving experiences to date, was the arrival of the immigrant ship, SS Ankara, where the group watched the processing of new arrivals by Jewish Agency officials, and interviewed families including some they had met the previous week at the refugee camp at Marseilles.

As the immigrants debarked, they were provided with refreshments and food parcels, put aboard buses and taken to new homes at Beersheba, Dimona and Tiberias.

Mr. Tanenbaum, Chairman of the Mission, said the group was impressed with the efficiency and kindness of the officials on their dealings with the immigrants. The Mission members could easily imagine the anxiety and bewilderment of the immigrants about their future, he added.

IN JEWISH NAZARETH

The Mission then went to the Nazareth Elit Jewish section in the upper city of ten thousand. The Jewish section was started six years ago with a settlement of fifty families surrounded by thirty-five hundred Arabs.

Mission members talked with several new arrivals, who moved into their new homes only two months ago. One immigrant, aged fifty, now digs ditches in Nazareth, but is grateful to be free, not afraid and that his only son will have a better life in Israel.

While in Nazareth, members of the Mission met ten-year-old Bouin Engeniusz whose aunt lives on Arlington Avenue in Toronto and promised to deliver a personal message to her.

VISIT STERN TOMB

The Study Mission also visited the Israel Jordan Water Diversion Scheme on the Sea of Galilee, where members were taken on a thorough tour. They were impressed with its engineering ingenuity.

The wife of Israel's Labour Minister Yigal Allon, a member of Kibbutz Ginosar near Tiberias, took the Study Mission to visit the grave of Shlomo Stern, brother of Toronto UJA staff member William Stern, who gave his life during the 1939 Arab riots.

The 1963 Toronto UJA Study Mission, led by H. Wayne Tanenbaum, includes: Morris Adams, Barney Barenholtz, Jeffery Cohen, Arthur I. Cole, Moe Emer, Louis Fruitman, Carl Goodman, Dr. Gerald Halbert, Harold Lederman, Albert Mandel, Stanley F. Paulin, Bernard J. Persiko, Murray Rumack, C. A., William Stern, Murray L. Taube and Harvey S. Wolfe.

TORONTO'S JEWISH LIBRARY

By DR. ISRAEL FRANKEL

DR. FRANKEL IS DIRECTOR-LIBRARIAN OF TORONTO'S JEWISH PUBLIC LIBRARY

An event of momentous importance for Toronto Jewry took place in this city recently. I refer to the dedication of the Jewish Public Library of Toronto. This building will be the storehouse of the accumulated wisdom of Jewry through the ages, and will stand as a perpetual memorial to the intellectual and moral strivings of Jews the world over. In an age when men fear intellectualism, the Library stands as a great challenge to man's flight from reason.

When Solomon said "to the making of books there is no end" (Ecclesiastes 12, 12) he must have said it in a mood of weariness and cynicism. It is true that there is much trash which appears as literature and much that is unworthy of reading. Yet, to scorn the word and the book is to do disservice to the creative talents of men. To our people in particular, the book means everything — we were born by the book, we have lived by the book, we have died by the book—and paradoxically, have achieved deathlessness through the book. If Judaism was ever impatient, it was impatient about ignorance.

"The Shechinah accompanied Israel into exile" says the Talmud pictures quely (Megillah 29a) Wherever they settle, the People of the Book, established spiritual citadels, libraries, academies, schools These were armouries that strengthened and protected the Jew against the sling and arrows of outrageous fortune (see Genesis R. 1[illegible] 20). Books were his constant companions during the [illegible] holy wars that crimsoned the Rhine with Jewish blood. The Books accompanied him through centuries of exile and wanderings, through the perilous passes of the Pyrennees, during Chemielnicki massacres of 1648, during the pogroms of Eastern Europe and the Nazi holocaust.

The eclipse of East European Jewry saw the rise of American Jewry as the largest Jewish community in the world. The torch that had illumined Jewish life in the old world with the fire of love for Jewish learning was rekindled in the New World. Today, the New World is exceptionally well equipped for Jewish research and Jewish studies.

Our library in Toronto specializes in Judaica in the three languages; i.e. English, Hebrew and Yiddish. Our rich collection, both for circulation and reference, covers every phase of Jewish life. We feel that anyone who browses among our shelves experiences a feeling of being united with the ages. Here one can see most precious works, the loving labours of great Jews throughout the generations. There are books from every part of the world where Jews once lived. One comes to realize how vital has been the Jewish past. It is hoped that this Library will be instrumental in instilling a great pride into many of our people (the younger generation in particular) about the richness of their Jewish heritage.

We, therefore, request all spiritual and lay leaders, teachers and parents to become further aware of the functions of the Toronto Jewish Public Library and to serve as an inspiration to the younger generation, at home and at school, in promoting and publicizing the services available at the Library.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

WELL OF BLESSING

Dearth of water is a recurring theme in the Bible story in relation to the land of Israel. It is still a bone of contention between Israel and its neighbouring States. The Torah does not reveal why, in a country with such a dire need of water, the Philistines should have stopped up the wells dug by Abraham. Nor does it explain why they now quarrelled with Isaac when he opened them anew.

All that we are told is the progress of this struggle, indicated by the names Isaac gave to the new wells he had dug. One he called "Esek," strife or contention; another he called "Sitnah", hatred, — as if to say, Here I am working to make this land fruitful, and all the Philistines can do is to obstruct.

But while the Torah does not supply the motive behind Philistine obstructiveness, tradition suggests that the Philistines were afraid that the wells were attracting too many strangers to the country. They would prefer that Isaac himself move on to pastures new, and the wish finds overt expression when at last, jealous of his success, they say to him, "Go from us, for thou hast become too mighty for us."

The point is symbolic of the Jew's fate throughout the long history of his dispersion. Wherever the Dispersion carried him, there was a well of creative ability that went before him. There is not a country where the Jew has lived that has not benefitted from his presence. Whether in Alexandria or in Antioch, in Bagdad or in Barcelona, and down to our times throughout the cities of the civilised world, Israel bestowed of his gifts to the nations of the world. But true to their ancient forbears, the Philistines, the Ferdinands and the Hitlers have resented the wells of blessings the Jew has opened up. They have tried to stop up the wells and turn the clock of progress backwards; again and again the philistine refrain has reached our ears: "Go from us, for you have become too mighty for us."

Nowhere, however, has the old Biblical story of Isaac and the Philistines been so faithfully re-enacted as in the Land of Israel itself. For the last 1800 years since the Jew was exiled from his land, how efficiently were the wells stopped up! The land that was once flowing with milk and honey was literally turned into a desert; but back came the Isaacs of our day to re-open the old wells. The fruit of his creative toil have brought blessing to the land, and could transform the whole of that arid area. Once again he has met with "Esek" and "Sitnah" for his pains. The modern philistine would rather have it remain a desolate and barren desert than share its fruitfulness with the seed of Isaac!

But the Bible story gives us hope. It tells us that Isaac's persistence was rewarded. He dug yet another well and was able to call it "Rehovoth", enlargement, — "for now God has given us room, and we shall be fruitful in the land".

Rabbi Akiva saw a repetition of this great event in the Jerusalem of the future, when he foresaw a similar ending to the conflict between the descendants of Isaac and the offfshoots of the Philistines. When that enlargement comes, and the strident cacophony of piled-up armaments and militant posturing dies down, the new well that will go up from there will bring blessing to all the peoples of the world.

ISRAEL'S POSITION

OUR TASKS AHEAD

By David Ben Gurion

A university education for every young man and woman is no utopia: it is a vital need for the people of Israel, and we may assume that in time every nation will have it. In America the Jews are already nearing that stage: there are 300,000 Jewish college students there, which is a higher proportion than for any other ethnic group in that country. But there this phenomenon is connected with the Jews' flight from labour. When I first came to America, in 1915, I found there a great Jewish labour movement numbering hundreds of thousands of workers in various trades. When I arrived there a year ago I still found Jewish leaders in every one of those trade unions, but the members of those unions are now almost all non-Jews. In America this may not be dangerous, for the Jews make only three per cent of the population and there is another 97 per cent. The non-Jews work in the field, the factory, the mines, on sea and on land, in the air and on the railroad, and the Jews buy and hire the fruit of their labour. In Israel we ourselves must do the work, and there is danger in a division according to which part of the nation has an education and does not work, and the other part works and does not have an education. Those two elements — work and education — can and must be united in every single man in Israel. Nor is work today what it was a century or two ago: as our knowledge progresses, a large part of the exhausting toil that men and beast used to perform then is being done by machines. besides, today's machines do not only physical but also mental work, and they perform it quicker and more accurately than men.

We have been hearing here, to my gratification, about doctors working in the Negev and in development towns. That is true; but there are not enough of them, and even those who work there do not all live there. Is this how we can expect to absorb immigrants and integrate the various population groups? An intelectual who lives away from the community where he works, plants a feeling of inferiority in the hearts of those who live on the spot, whether he is aware of it or not, and nothing harms integration more than the display of superiority feelings by one party and the creation of inferiority feelings in the other.

The engineer, the teacher, the doctor and other professions must live at their place of work. He who works in Lydda should live there; he who works in Dimona should live in Dimona, not in Tel Aviv, not even in Beersheba. No job, physical or intellectual, is merely a means of livelihood, although that aspect must not be neglected; it is also a mission, and knowledge is a mission too. Among the obligations imposed by that mission is to work with and among the people who share your task — for mutual betterment. The intellectuals are not the only ones who should leave Tel Aviv unless they have a job there. If it were possible to take 200,000 Jews out of Tel Aviv and to distribute them through Northern Galilee, the South and the Negev, I would do it gladly. It would promote security, immigrant absorption, integration among the communities. But those who take up jobs in the Negev must live there — be they teachers, doctors, nurses or other professionals. For only then shall we forge one nation in our country; only then will they impart to the people around them some of their own spirit; only then will they contribute to the betterment of the public among whom they dwell, and through it to their own betterment.

NEGEV TO GALILEE

That is the great problem that confronts us, and it is connected with another problem that is also vital: populating the Negev. When I say Negev I mean northern Galilee as well. The Negev for us today is any place that is desolate or has no Jewish population. That is the position in part of northern Galilee and in the whole South and Negev, from Ashdod to Eilat.

Our land lies at the meeting point of three continents. We dwell at the western extremity of Asia, the cradle of human civilization, of religion, philosophical thought, poetry, science, the home of more than half of the world's population. Another continent, Europe, has for the past centuries set the pace of mankind's education, culture and civilization, and will continue to do so for years to come. The continent of Africa, downtrodden for centuries and subjected to colonial rule, is now emancipating itself. Its peoples are the world's most primitive, and their economic and social standing should be raised, and can be raised, to that of Europe's peoples.

The Mediterranean connects us with Europe; our main link with Asia and Africa is through Eilat and the Red Sea. This opening to the Indian Ocean is a tremendous historic asset, for with the exception of Egypt we are the world's only state with sea outlets to all three of those continents. But Eilat is worthless, and its very existence is endangered, so long as its whole "hinterland," the broad Negev that accounts for 60 per cent of Israel's area, remains unpopulated.

LUNCHEON BORES

I have written more than once about the bore you can meet on a luncheon date, but the subject bears constant repetition since it is so frequent an occurrence in your life.

The first bore is the fellow who insists on taking care of the tip while you take care of the bill. He waves you toward the cashier with the $5.29 check while he fishes in his pocket for 30 cents.

Another bore is the "no-dessert-for-me," a statement he utters like papal bull. He is a fellow who can occasionally be espied buying himself two candy bars while no one else is looking. His attachment to asceticism shames you and you, who would like a dessert, forgo it as you might forgo meat in the presence of a monk.

There is yet another bore: the "Dutch treat" bore. He is as distressing a bore as an amateur singer. "Let's go Dutch," he says and off you go with your wives. You pay the check while he lights his cigar and out on the street he says laudly, "Okay how much do I owe you"

This is putting you on the spot. You weren't sure you wanted to go to dinner in the first place.

"Forget it," you say, "you pay next time." But this guy is a persistent bore and even when you hold him to the bargain, he doesn't mind your giving him the best of it.

If the check was $9.60, you'll say "Four dollars will take care of it," and that's what he wants to settle for, forgetting that he had two brandies and his wife a creme de menthe while you and yours for reasons of your own, settled for a coffee. He makes with the $4 like he's doing you a big favor.

The gentlemanly thing to do, of course, in each instance is one: let your host pay the tip. He treated you to dinner; there is no reason to minimize his generosity by slamming down the inconsequential tip.

The "no-dessert-for-me" ascetic ought not make such a big deal out of his self-denial and self-abnegation. Should you not want dessert, say to the waiter, "See what my friend will have first."

Any other way is really to hold a companion in contempt, as though to declare, "I don't take dessert but my soft-loving, decadent, sugar eating pal does because he has no values".

There is only one honorable way to handle the "Dutch treat" situation. When the check is presented, ask quietly, "Please let me see the check". Addition is not that hard. Pay your share silently and unobtrusively, when the ladies repair to the powder room. To ask what you owe on the sidewalk is to play the big shot which you definitely are not.

Having covered this material, I believe I shall ask my editors if they will let me start a Harry Golden's Lower East Side Etiquette Column. The country needs one.

HUMAN RELATIONS

Unwanted Friend

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: Every morning I walk to school with one of my girl friends who lives across the street from me. We also walk home together. Since the begining of this new term, another girl who lives on the block calls for us to come down. She also waits for us after school.

Both my friend and I—we are 11 years old—do not particularly enjoy being with her, but we don't know how to brush her off. We can't just tell her to go away. What can we do?

ANSWER: Both you and your friend appear to be well brought up youngsters, in the finest sense. Your consideration of the feeling of another tells of the love and consideration you received from your parents. When the teachings of the elders are shown in the behavior of the children the lesson is well taught.

At your age girls are friendly mostly with girls, but are already beginning to think about the days when they will make friends with boys and be invited to parties. To walk alone on the way to and from school make one stand out and appear to be unwanted. It may also seem like a forecast of things to come.

A girl who has no one to walk to school with may fear she will never have a boy who will ask her to talk or walk with him.

You and your friend feel very fortunate that you have each other. Because you have been graced with friendship and companionship, you want to be nice to her. Hence, in letting this girl come with you and giving her your companionship, you are not only giving to her, but to yourselves, too. Giving to another also makes you feel superior, and tells the world and the fates how you want to be treated should you ever find yourselves lonely or alone.

But you think this girl is using you, and wants to be with you because she has no one else. This may be true at times. But she must also admire and appreciate you or she would not take the chance of being rejected.

Your friendship with the girl you like can be hurt if you are unfriendly to the other one. Both you and your friend will begin to wonder whether you might some day act in this rejecting way to each other.

At your age it is well to make as many friends among girls as your time for being with them permits. To have only one girl friends is a form of going steady which is not appropriate for two girls. It creates a kind of fence around them which excludes others and keeps them from being invited by other girls, and then by boys.

You are not obliged to go with people whom you don't like. Their demand for your presence or friendship is certainly not a command which you must obey. But in your hesitation to tell this girl that she is not wanted, you suggest that you do not dislike her altogether.

It is understandable that you and your friend do not want others to intrude at times when you want to be alone together to exchange confidences. But given a little time, this third girl will probably make friends on her own, and surely, the more friendly you are to her, the easier it will be for her to let go and go out on her own.

WORKS BOTH WAYS

Harry: Are you Louis Neff?

Louis: Yes, I am.

Harry: Well, then, I have regards for you from my tailor, Mr. Sherry. He says he remembers you when you were still Kishineffsky.

Louis: Did you say Mr. Sherry? Is he chubby, with a very short neck and completely bald?

Harry: That's the one.

Louis: O, well, you mean Ike Sheresheffsky, don't you?

DUAL ALLEGIANCE

Solomon Rabinowitz appeared before Judge Holloway for his final papers. He happened to be the last on the list, and the judge therefore said to him:

"Rabinowitz, you seem to be a respectable man, so I will not trouble you with many questions. Only one thing: will you solemnly swear to support the Constitution?"

"Your honor," snapped Rabinowitz, "how can I? I have a wife and six children in the old country."

SLIGHT ERROR

Kalman (stopping a stranger on Roosevelt Road in Chicago): Hello, Zalman! When did you arrive from New York? How is your wife? Will you let me have a cigarette and tell me how a Jew fares?

Stranger: I beg your pardon, but my name is not Zalman and I am not from New York. I am not married and I do not smoke. Your only correct guess is that I am a Jew.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

ORANGE CHIFFON CAKE
2½ cups sifted cake flour
1½ cups granulated sugar
3 teaspoons double acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup salad oil
5 egg yolks, unbeaten
Grated rind of 2 oranges
Juice of 2 oranges plus enough water to measure 1 cup liquid
1 cup egg whites (7 or 8)
½ teaspoon cream or tartar

Heat oven to low moderate, 325 degrees. Measure — then sift into a bowl the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a well in this mixture and add oil, yolks, orange rind and liquid. Beat with a spoon for 150 full strokes.

In another large bowl, beat the egg whites with the cream of tartar until they stand in very stiff peaks — stiffer than when they're to be used for a meringue. Pour yolk mixture gently over the egg whites and fold heavier mixture into the white. Do not stir. Pour into an ungreased 10-inch tube pan and bake in a moderately low (325 degree) oven for 65 minutes.

Remove from oven. Invert pan, placing tube in neck of a funnel or bottle or resting edges of pan on two other pans of equal height. Let stand in this position until cake is cold. Loosen around edges of pan with a spatula. Turn pan over and hit sharply on table to loosen, then invert pan over a plate and cake should slip out.

WOMEN'S DIVISION OF TORONTO BOND ORGANIZATION IN ACTION

With two major events on their calendar during this week, the women of the Israel Bond Organization are maintaining a hectic pace of activity. Capacity attendance at the gala "Dior-Israel Fashion Show Luncheon" on November 29th was achieved a full week before the event —the first time this has ever been advance reservation completed so quickly. Simultaneously, committee members are hard at work processing requests for tickets for the historic Convention honoring Golda Meir when she visits Toronto on December 2nd. This great Israeli statesman and leader has special appeal to the women of our community, and requests are pouring into the Bond Office for tickets.
Shown here at an Executive meeting held at the home of Mrs. Irving Posluns on November 21st are, left to right: Mrs. Posluns, Associate Chairman; Mrs. Morris Zweig, Chairman of the Women's Division; and Mrs. Nathan Silver, Sponsors Chairman. Mrs. Zweig will make a presentation to Her Excellency Golda Meir, on behalf of the Toronto Women's Division.

INGRID FISTELL

PROFILE OF A TORONTONIAN by Ruth Teitel

From Wagner Town To Toronto

How does a beautiful young singer, born and raised in Nazi Germany, become a member of Toronto Pioneer Women, actively engaged in raising funds for Israel? The singer is Ingrid Fistell, 29, whose career is currently flourishing in the field of light opera and folk song. Among her many engagements was a memorable appearance as guest soloist at the community farewell dinner for Dr. and Mrs. S.B. Hurwich recently.

Golden-haired, blue-eyed Ingrid has the stature and demeanor of Wagner's "Valkyrie", but her quick wit and gaity belie the image. Her eyes smile as she recalls the unlikely road which led her from her native Ehingen, Germany, to the comfortable home in suburban Downview where she lives with her husband and 2 daughters, Linda, 7, and Marla, 4.

Ten years ago, Ingrid was awarded a music scholarship for a year's study in the U.S., but, en route from Germany, she met Sam Fistell, a Toronto businessman, and, not too reluctantly, gave up the scholarship in favor of marriage. Ingrid enjoys a close relationship with her husband's family, has encountered no unfavourable reaction to the marriage from her own family in Germany, and seems surprised at the suggestion, since her mother and grandmother grew up among Jewish people.

Converted to Judaism, Ingrid adopted her husband's faith because "I wanted my family to be a unit. I intend to enroll the children in a Jewish school when they are older, where they will learn the history of their people, and, of course, Hebrew." As for religion, the Fistells feel that it should not be stressed until the children are eighteen and capable of making their own decisions. "Our children are Jewish, but brought up along liberal and flexible lines."

Like many young Jewish matrons, Ingrid joined Toronto Pioneer Women in a spirit of sympathy and service to Israel, but it wasn't long before her remarkable singing voice was discovered. Result: last year's P.W. cultural program was highlighted by a Cantata based on the life of David Ben Gurion, starring soprano soloist Ingrid Fistell.

A thoughtful and outspoken young woman, Ingrid has very definite opinions and no compunction about sharing them. A few years ago she organized and led a delegation to her local M.P., protesting the re-armament of Germany. A friend recalls her words at a Pioneer Woman's meeting at that time: "The trouble is, the world today is governed by old men. What do they care if our children's milk is poisoned by fallout, or the suffering that is caused by war. They won't be around to worry about it!"

Suffering is no stranger to Ingrid Fistell. She still has dim childhood memories of hunger and poverty during the war. At one time, four member of her family, which was in disfavour with the government, were arrested by the Gestapo. "When they took my father and brothers, I remember my mother went out and bought a cemetery plot. She was going to set up a plaque on it so there would be something to remember them by. It was a miracle when they finally came back." At the age of 11, she was conscripted into the government char service corps. ("It was not a happy time.").

Ingrid resumed her singing career three years ago, by competing in local music festivals, from which she emerged with flying colors, She won her class at the C.N.E., took 3 gold medals and a silver at the Toronto East Music Festival, and at Peel County, won the Rose Bowl trophy and the W.E. Capps memorial scholarship. Last summer, during a visit to Germany, she applied for tickets to the Wagnerian Festival at Beyreuth, and, in the ensuing confusion auditioned as a soprano, ("It was the only way I could get tickets"), and wound singing the lead in Honegger's opera, "King David".

What impressed her most about Germany today? "The prosperity. Everything's thriving, and they seem to be becoming very Americanized. You know, everyone has a car, and nobody walks anymore or saves money the way they used to."

In addition to her many singing engagements, (her epertoire includes Yiddish, Hebrew, and Japanese Folk songs), Ingrid is enrolled at University of Toronto Faculty of Music, where she has achieved first class honours. In her spare time she also teaches singing and piano.

"No, I guess I'm not a typical Jewish housewife," she concedes enigmatically. "It seems to me they're overly concerned about children, housework, and meals, to the exclusion of everything else. I don't get upset if the house isn't spotless or the meals a little late. We have a housekeeper, and thank God, I have a very understanding husband!"

Mr. Fistell readily concurs. "Ingrid is the pivot of our home, and if she's happy, we all are. Both kids are musically inclined and fortunate to have a mother who can help them. I think Ingrid has great potential as a singer, and it would be a pity not to develop it."

GIRLS WILL BE GIRLS

By RUTHIE

Why is it that girls at any stage of life refuse to act their age? Watch any female from the time she can crawl until, maybe, adolescence. What's her favorite game? Playing house. She finds a "daddy", bosses him around, cuddles her "babies", spanks them too — just like Mommy.

Then, when she approaches her teens, and a little beyond, she wants to appear older. Just tell a twelve-year-old she looks fifteen, and she'll worship you forever.

But, poor thing, her actions give her away. I remember several incidents during my ripe, old age of fourteen. I tried so hard to be sophisticated. Somewhere I had heard the corny suggestion that if you look condescending and do not utter a word, you'll develop an air of mystery, age considerably and become a femme fatale. Oh, how I tried!

All I got for my pains was Papa's classic reaction, "Zay nurr (see here)! Ruthie, why the nose so high in the air? You'll stumble."

This didn't do my ego any good. The final test came one summer-day when the family was vacationing in the Catskills. By then I consider myself the cat's meow. What I looked for was a boy upon whom to practice my skills.

The opportunity came. One morning, about an hour before lunch, when the porch of the hotel was deserted, I found myself sitting on the steps alone, planning some strategy. Out of nowhere appeared one of the musicians, strumming on his banjo. He stood as though he were God's gift to woman.

My heart began doing summersaults. But when he noticed me and casually said, hello, I suddenly got butterflies in my stomach and ran, like from a fire.

I could have kicked myself afterwards. For a long time he was my secret romance in a world of make-believe. (He probably had a wife and children).

* * * *

For about ten years after you're married, you don't give age much thought. You're too busy with hubby, home and raising kids. Comes the day, however, when you've "nothing to do". Everything is routine.

What woman will attest to over forty? So you doll up more than ever, throw yourself into worthy causes, ignore the kinks in your back and make like a spring chicken.

By the time you reach old age, you're sure you are young once more. After all, you participate (bless you) in fashion shows, some nice Mendel who can hardly swing in a rocker throws you his one good eye — and you're ready to play house again.

Whatever the age, I'm awfully glad I'm a female.

● Igor Stravinsky insisted that he wouldn't talk music to Khrushchev. Instead they discussed the cotton industry in Tashkent.

● Cary Grant's collection of paintings include landscapes of Israel by Reuven Rubin. Two of the paintings, which Cary lent, can be seen hanging in an office in the film, That Touch of Mink.

● A square and a street in Tel Aviv were named recently for a stage artist and two poets killed during Stalin's purge of Jewish writers and artists in Russia ten years ago. The square was named for Shlomo Mikhoels, a founder of the Jewish Chamber Theater in the Soviet Union and head of the Jewish anti-Fascist committee in 1941. The streets are called Rehov Haim VeElisha, in memory of Elisha Rudin and Haim Lensky.

● Katherine Hepburn has this to say: Everyone has to be so damn young today. The idea that everyone wants to keep his body eternally 17 is bloody wrong nonsense.

● Funnyman Alan King was born and bred in Brooklyn, New York. At the age of 12 he sang for pennies in backyards and at 15 he hit the Borsht Circuit, playing in resort hotels in the Catskill Mountains. From there, the sky became the limit. He already gave two command performances for Queen Elizabeth and appeared by invitation at the White House Inauguration.

● Recently Milton Berle saved the life of a man. Walking through the bar at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas after finishing his act, Berle saw a man tumbling off a bar stool. Nobody looked up; everybody thought he was drunk. Berle, however, recognized the man's pallor and blue lips. He knew the latter was having a heart seizure. Without thinking twice, the fifty-year-old comedian knelt down and, for eighteen minutes, kept breathing life into the mouth of the victim. As Berle found out afterwards, he saved a life. And he doesn't even know the man's name!

● Abba Eban is writing an adaptation of "Oedipus Rex" for his brother-in-law, David Ross. Eban says, "I'm using modern, formal English. No thous, thees or forsooths".

● A defendant last year in a paternity suit, George Jessel now recognizes the 10-month-old girl named Charys, and he will adopt her. Several days ago he visited the baby and her mother. Champagne was served in a glass. The baby reached for it, sipped the champagne and made a wry face — but finished the drink.

"See?" beamed Jessel. "Just like me. Now I have no doubts the child is mine".

THEATER HI-LIGHTS

The end of November sees the last of the performances of Ionesco's "The Lesson" and "The Chairs" at the Red Barn, Central Library Theater. The final performance of Samuel Beckett's Happy Days is on December 3rd. From December 4th to 15th, Mrs. Waren's Profession, by George Bernard Shaw, will play nightly, with matinees at 4.00 p.m. on Saturdays. On December 22nd, the Red Barn will open a play for children which will run through the Cristmas holiday season.

On January 6th, the Red Barn company playing Mrs. Warren's Profession, flies to Winnipeg to rehearse before opening a two-week run of this joint production with The Manitoba Theatre Center.

BENTOR IN TORONTO

A former teacher of the late Peretz Grader of Toronto, Prof. Yaacov Bentor of the Hebrew University, has been invited to address the mining geology and geophysics students at the University of Toronto on Friday, November 30th. Prof. Bentor, who is Professor of Petrography and Mineralogy at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, was one of Percy Grader's teachers when the late Dr. Grader obtained his Ph.D. at this institution.

Dr. Grader, whose parents, brothers and sisters reside in Toronto, was at the time of his tragic death, Petroleum Commissioner in Israel's Ministry of Finance, and head of the Oil Division in the Ministry of Development's Geological Survey.

Prof. Bentor has been invited by the Division of Earth Sciences of the United States National Academy of Sciences — National Research Council to serve as one of a small group of distinguished foreign experts on salt deposits at a conference on the subject which was held this month in Houston, Texas. While in Toronto, Prof. Bentor will meet the late Dr. Grader's parents and will also meet with members of the Executive of the Toronto Chapter of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University.

Music in Toronto

by DANIEL J. GAISIN

A Masterful Performance

Daniel Barenboim has been acclaimed by critics as a superb musician and at a recital in Massey Hall last Saturday night, he displayed a technique worthy of such praise. Although he is barely past his teens, he has a musical maturity rarely found in someone his age.

His opening work, four impromtus by Shubert, was treated almost clinically and without the warmth with which they are usually read. I felt he did not put enough emphasis on the lyricism usually found in a Shubert work. His impeccable skill and balance, however, held the far too small audience in rapt attention.

The first major work was the Sonata — No. 23 in F minor by Beethoven — the Appassionata. This work has been considered an interpretation of Shakespeare's MacBeth by musical historians. Mr. Barenboim's reading was in a fomal and orderly style somewhat reminiscent of Lorin Hollander, another young virtuoso who also places much emphasis on technique. However, the piece received its descriptive name. The rolls of thunder and forces of nature were presented as clear and recognizable pictures and were definitely the manifestation of the pianist's deep understanding of the composer. The artist's very personal approach to romantic music, coupled with his amazing dexterity, especially in the andante, made the Appassionata the highlight of the concert.

The second major work was Brahm's Variations and Fugue on a theme of Handel. The original theme, taken from Handel's 2nd book of Harpsichord suites, is simply harmonized in four-quarter time with all the trills which are characteristic of the period. It is difficult work to perform because of its remarkable figuration and mood which still manages to maintain a scrupulous closeness to the original theme. Mr. Barenboim handled all the 25 variations magnificently. In the eighth variation his right hand performed the invertible counterpoint in a most expressive and well-balanced manner that was quite dramatic. His reading of the work reached its height in the 20th variation where he brought out all of the chromatic intensity with rich chords and perfect emphasis.

The response from the audience was such that the artist consented to play two encores, including the Fantasie by Schumann which he presented in a light and rather breezy style.

Mr. Barenboim is a source of great pride to his young homeland. It is hoped he will return to Toronto for another fine concert in the near future.

Ben Wortsman To Head Eitz Chaim Campaign

Mr. Harry Korolnek, President of Toronto's Eitz Chaim Schools, this week announced that Ben Wortsman, business executive and prominent Toronto Jewish communal leader, has agreed to accept chairmanship of the 1963 Eitz Chaim Emergency Deficit Campaign. The objective of the 1963 Campaign is $227,000 to meet accumulated deficits and current operating costs.

In accepting the office as chairman, Mr. Ben Wortsman urged Toronto Jewry to give their wholehearted support to the campaign to enable Eitz Chaim to continue with its Torah education program. Mr. Wortsman pointed out that the participation of every community-minded Jew is needed to keep the Eitz Chaim School doors open so that Eitz Chaim can be of service to the children of the community.

50 YEARS OF SERVICE

Mr. Wortsman declard that throughout the years hundreds of students have benefitted from the Eitz Chaim School program and is looking forward to their participation in the campaign.

Starting with only 7 children in one room on Chestnut Street almost five decades ago, Talmud Torah Eitz Chaim has been providing educational services continually for the Jewish children of Toronto and today has an enrolment of a thousand children.

YESHIVA SHLOMEI EMUNEI BANQUET

The committee of Toronto's Yeshiva Shlomei Emunei Israel announces that its Annual Dinner will be held on Saturday night, December 15th, at social hall of the Ahavath Achim-Nachlath Israel, 275 Vaughan Road. Mr. Meyer W. Gasner has accepted chairmanship of this year's banquet.

The president of the Yeshiva, which is located at 6 Major Street, and of which Rabbi Meyer Gruenwald is the dean, issued a moving appeal to the community to support this important institution of Torah-true Jewry.

In a statement to the community, signed by Mr. S. Reichmann, president, S.A. Wolf and S. Koplovitch, vice presidents, and committee members, H. Meirovitch, M. Reichmann, Abraham Perl, Yeheskiel Lensk, it was declared:

"The Yeshiva Shlomei Emunei Israel of Toronto is fulfilling a historic task in its effort to raise generations of Torah-true Jews, — Jews who are ready to dedicate themselves to the ideal of the preservation of Torah and mitzvoth.

"We are now living in a period of Jewish history when North American Jewry pays more attention to the problem of Jewish education. Here in Toronto gigantic efforts have been made to strengthen Jewish education.

"One of the important institutions contributing to the growth and development of Torah-education in our city for the last ten years has been Yeshiva Shlomei Emunei Israel, which is based upon the true, uncompromising ideal of preserving the Torah as the everlasting heritage of our people. Forty students have already graduated from our Yeshiva and now are continuing their Torah studies in famous Yeshivas in the United States and Israel.

"We believe it is the sacred duty of every Torah-loving Jew to support our Yeshiva."

ISRAELI SCHOLAR VISITS TORONTO

Dr. Moshe Sambatyon, well known Israeli author and scholar, now is visiting Toronto in connection with the appearance of his new "international encyclopedia: World of Love and Marriage". Dr. Sambatyon's recent work, "the book of books of romance and marriage", is a collection of tales, legends and customs referring to marriage and divorce based on the various religious traditions. A special reception committee has been formed here to promote Dr. Sambatyon's works, among them a Talmudic dictionary.

Progress of Toronto United Synagogue Day School

Here are some interesting facts about Toronto's United Synagogue Day School, sponsored by the Conservative Synagogues of Toronto and which functions at the Beth Tzedec building:

* There are presently 167 students enrolled in the Kindergarten to Grade 5 classes — an increase of 50% over last year's school population. New staff members have joined both the Hebrew and the General Studies Departments.

* The educational staff now includes 15 teachers, a music specialist, a Folkdancing instructor, a School Psychologist, a consulting Speech Therapist and a School Nurse.

* The Study of French has been introduced in the 4th and 5th Grades. Elementary Geometry especially designed for young children is now taught in the 2nd and 3rd Grades.

* Taking advantage of the pre-winter weather our children have participated in the following trips and excursions: the Kindergarten enjoyed a "Fall Study" outing at Sherwood Forest and a trip to the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair; the Second Graders visited a dentist's office and are now less reluctant to brush their teeth; the Fourth Graders, who are studying about Toronto in their Social Studies course, visited the old and the newer Jewish institutions of Toronto. The Third Graders stopped the presses at the University of Toronto Press while being shown the various machines.

* For the acquisition of Midot (personal quality traits) the school is combining the study of selections from the Mishna Avot (Ethics of the Fathers) and a pamphlet series "Getting Along" — designed to aid youngsters to learn to live with others. The Hebrew and General Studies teachers as well as the School Psychologist have worked co-operatively on this unit for the 5th Grade.

* A series of lecture-seminars on various aspects of the total educational picture have been initiated for the Faculty and the members of the Education Committees. The first session dealt with the "Integration of Art Into The Total Learning Programme" and was presented by Mr. Louis Shore, the Consultant for Art Studies and Activities of the Board of Education of Toronto.

DAWN

a novel by ELIE WIESEL the author of NIGHT

CHAPTER IX

I expected my listeners to scrutinize my head to see if it had really returned to normal size, but they did nothing of the sort. They continued to stare into their stone-cold tea. In the next few minutes nobody opened his mouth. We had no more desire to call up the past or to listen to our fellows tell their troubled life stories. We sat in restless silence around the table. Every one of us, I am sure, was asking himself to what he really owed his life. Gideon was the first to speak.

"We ought to take the Englishman something to eat," he said.

Yes, I said to myself, Gideon is sad, too. He's thinking of John Dawson. He must be; it's inevitable.

"I don't imagine he's hungry," I said aloud, "You can't expect a man condemned to die to have an appetite." And to myself I added: "Or a man condemned to kill either."

There must have been a strange tone in my voice, for the others raised their heads and I felt the puzzled quality of their penetrating stares.

"No," I said stubbornly; "a man condemned to die can't be hungry."

They did not stir, but sat petrified as the seconds dragged interminably by.

"The condemned man's traditional last meal is a joke," I said loudly, "a joke in the worst possible taste, an insult to the corpse that he is about to be. What does an man care if he dies with an empty stomach?"

The expression of astonishment lingered in Gad's eyes, but Ilana looked at me with compassion and Gideon with friendliness. Joab did not look at me at all. His eyes were lowered. but perhaps that was his way of looking out of them.

"He doesn't know," remarked Gideon.

"He doesn't know what?" I asked, without any conscious reason for raising my voice. Perhaps I wanted arouse my anger and see it reflected in the motionless shadows in the mirror and on the wall. Or perhaps out of sheer weakness. I felt powerless to change anything, least of all myself, in spite of the fact that I wanted to introduce a transformation into the room, to reorder the whole of creation. I would have made the Saint into a madman, have given John Dawson's name to Gad and his fate to David. But I knew there was nothing I could do. To have such a power I should have had to take the place of death, not just the individual death of John Dawson, the English captain who had no more appetite than I.

"What doesn't he know?" I repeated stridently.

"He doesn't know he's going to die," said Gideon in a sorrowfully dreamy voice.

"His stomach knows," I retorted. "A man about to die listens only to his stomach. He pays no attention to his heart or his past, or to yours for that matter. He doesn't even hear the voice of the storm. He listens to his stomach and his stomach tells him that he is going to die and that he isn't hungry."

I had talked too fast and too loud and I was left panting. I should have liked to run away, but my friends' stares transfixed me. Death sealed off every exit, and everywhere there were eyes.

"I'm going down to the cellar," said Gideon. "I'll ask him if he wants something to eat."

"Don't ask him anything," I said. "Simply tell him that tomorrow, when the sun rises above the blood-red horizon, he, John Dawson, will say good-by to life, good-by to his stomach. Tell him that he's going to die."

Gideon got up, with his eyes still on me, and started toward the kitchen and the ntrance to the cellar. At the door he paused.

"I'll tell him," he said, with a quickly fading smile. The he turned on his heels and I heard him going down the stairs.

I was grateful for his consent. He and not I would warn John Dawson of his approaching end. I could ever have done it. It's easier to kill a man than to break the news that he is going to die.

"Midnight," said Joab.

Midnight, I reflected, the hour when the dead rise out of their graves and come to say their prayers in the synagogue, the hour when God Himself weeps over the destruction of the Temple, the hour when a man should be able to plumb the depths of his being and to discover the Temple in ruins. A God that weeps and dead men that pray.

"Poor boy!" murmured Ilana.

She did not look at me, but her tears scrutinized my face. Her tears rather than her eyes caressed me.

"Don't say that, Ilana. Don't call me 'poor boy.'"

There were tears in her eyes, or rather there were tears in the place of her eyes, tears which with every passing second grew heavier and more opaque and threatened to overflow. . . . I was afraid that suddenly the worst would happen: the dusky Ilana would no longer be there; she would have drowned in her tears. I wanted to touch her arm and say Dont cry. Say what you like, but don't cry.

But she wasn't crying. It takes eyes to cry, and she had no eyes, only tears where her eyes should have been.

"Poor boy!" she repeated.

Then what I had foreseen came true. Ilana disappeared, and Catherine was there instead. I wondered why Catherine had come, but her apparition did not particularly surprise me. She liked the opposite sex, and particularly she liked little boys who were thinking of death. She liked to speak of love to little boys, and since men going to their death are little boys she liked to speak to them of love. For this reason her presence in the magical room—magical because it transcended the differences, the boundary lies between the victim and the executioner, between the present and the past — was not surprising.

I had met Catherine in Paris in 1945, when I had just come from Buchenwald, that other magical spot, where the living were transformed into dead and their future into darkness. I was weakened and half starved. One of the many rescue committees sent me to a camp where a hundred boys and girls were spending their summer vacation. The camp was in Normandy, where the early morning breeze rustled the same way it did in Palestine.

Because I knew no French I could not communicate with the other boys and girls. I ate and sunbathed with them, but I had no way of talking. Catherine was the only person who seemed to know any German and occasionally we exchanged a few words. Sometimes she came up to me at the dining-room table and asked me whether I had slept well, enjoyed my meal, or had a good time during the day.

She was twenty-six or seven years old; small, frail, and almost transparent, with silky blonde, sunlit hair and blue, dreamy eyes which never cried. Her face was thin but saved from being bony by the delicacy of the features. She was the first woman I had seen from nearby. Before this—that is, before the war—I did not look at women. On my way to school or the synagogue I walked close to the walls, with my eyes cast down on the ground. I knew that women existed, and why, but I did not appreciate the fact that they had a body, breasts, legs, hands and lips whose touch sets a man's heart to beating. Catherine revealed this to me.

The camp was at the edge of a wood, and after supper I went walking there all by myself, talking to the murmuring breeze and watching the sky turn a deeper and deeper blue. I liked to be alone.

One evening Catherine asked if she might go with me, and I was too timid to say anything but yes. For half an hour, we walked in complete silence. At first I found the silence embarrasting, then to my surprise I began to enjoy it. The silence of two people is deeper than the silence of one. Involuntarily I began to talk.

RUSSIA

MARSHAK'S 75TH BIRTHDAY

Moscow, (JCNS) The 75th birthday of Samuel Marshak, the Soviet Jewish playwright, poet and translator, was the occasion for warm tributes in the press, and especially by the Association of Soviet Writers in Moscow.

"Moscow News" in an article entitled "Samuel Marshak, the Great Man of Letters," recalled his outstanding contribution to Russian literature. In fact, said the author of the article Boris Galanov, a leading Russian writer, there are not one but five Marshaks, because his contribution to Soviet children's literature, drama, criticism, poetry and translation cannot be over-estimated.

The son of a Jewish businessman, Marshak, who studied at London University before the First World War, is today regarded as one of the Soviet Union's leading authors and translators. He won fame first as the Editor of a children's journal, then by writing poetry and books especially for children. Today he is chiefly known in Russia and in the world as a translator of Shakespeare, Blake, Burns, Keats, Wordsworth and Browning.

Although during the celebrations no mention was made of his Jewish origin, he himself has very frequently referred to it, and many Russians have acknowledged the great services he has rendered to Russian and world literature.

SHOSTAKOVICH SELECTS YIDDISH SONGS

London, (JCNS) Dimitri Shostakovich, the famous Soviet composer, together with members of the Russian Composers' Union, attended a special audition held in the Union's headquarters in Moscow, to select 20 Yiddish folk songs to be published shortly by the State Publishing House.

Among the works Shostakovich found most interesting and agreed to include in the coming volume of Yiddish folk songs are David Bromberg's "Song of Songs," Samuel Sandri's "My Mother wanted to attend my Wedding," a new lullaby by Moses Napotovsky, and a new musical suite entitled "Let us Sing a New Song" by Aaron Vergilis, the Yiddish Russian poet and Editor of "Sovietish Haimland." The music for this suite was composed by Zinovi Kompaneytz.

At the end of the audition Shostakovich declared that the new volume would certainly be met with appreciation by all music lovers, especially those who had learned to appreciate, as he did, Yiddish folk songs.

AID FOR PROFESSOR LANDAU

MOSCOW (JCNS) Eighty-seven doctors, including general practitioners, specialists and, particularly, brain surgeons, took part in the efforts which saved the life of Professor Lev Landau, the Soviet Jewish scientist who was awarded the Nobel Prize a fortnight ago.

Details now released disclose that immediately after the car crash in which Landau suffered severe brain injuries, the Soviet authorities organised a world-wide search for specialists and medicines in order to save Landau's life.

PRAGUE

SLANSKY'S REHABILITATION

LONDON (JCNS) — A prosecutor and one of the "People's Judges" who took part in the trial and sentence of Rudolf Slansky ten years ago have been dismissed by the Czechoslovak authorities and are expected to face a trial themselves.

According to reports from Prague, 47 senior officials, former members of the Secret Police and Ministry of Justice, have been dismissed from their posts. Among them is Dr. Urvakek, who was one of the Prosecuting Counsels in the Slansky trial and Mr. Zdenek Pospesil, one of the Judges.

It will be recalled that Slansky, the former Jewish General-Secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party and a group of high ranking Jewish officials, were tried in 1952, sentenced to death and executed. They had been charged with 'criminal' Zionist activities.

The move is believed to be a preliminary step towards the rehabilitation of Slansky and other victims of the ruthless purges carried out during that period. Some of the families of the victims are reported to have been informed that a State Pension will be paid to them as compensation for the injustice committed by the "former followers of the personality cult."

MOROCCO

ADVICE TO MOROCCAN JEWS

Rabat, (JCNS) Moroccan Jews have been urged to turn up "en masse" when the draft of a national constitution is submitted to a nationwide referendum soon. The Federation of Jewish Communities has called on Jews to register on the electoral rolls immediately.

No details of the constitution have been revealed yet, but it is expected that it will set up a constitutional monarchy under King Hassan II and provide for the election of a national legislative assembly.

Unofficial sources say it will also include guarantees of public freedoms, make Morocco a Moslem state with Arabic as its official language and create two legislative chambers, the equivalent of a senate and a parliament.

Among the public freedoms that Jews particularly would like to see guaranteed, one of the foremost is freedom of movement. This is already an established principle in theory although restrictions on movement have been imposed at times.

Meanwhile, Alall al Fassy, Minister of Islamic Affairs and President of the ruling Istiqlal Party, in a statement to the Federation of Jewish Communities here, said that "There will never be any racial discrimination in Morocco."

Al Fassy made his statement after recent reports in the Moroccan Press that the Government considered Moroccan Jews to be "dimmiss" or second-class citizens who bought the pivilege of living in a Moslem country by paying a special tax.

The Minister admitted that the "dimmis" status had existed in Moslem countries but he said that today "the Moslem world has been voluntarily orientated towards the modern theory of citizenship with the complete integration of all elements that compose the national entity.

"Hence, in Morocco, there are not several categories of citizens. There is only one citizen, the Moroccan." The Minister said that all Moroccan laws proved that this conception of citizenship was the only one in force in the country, because all Moroccans, whether Jewish, Moslem or of any other faith, could participate in public life, in elections and in the Government.

FRANCE

KOSHER KITCHEN AT ORLY AIRPORT

Paris, (JCNS) A kosher kitchen has been installed by El Al at Orly airport and will begin functioning regularly this week-end. It will ensure the supply of kosher meals to all El Al aircraft leaving for Israel.

GONCOURT PRIZE

Paris, (JCNS) Anna Langfus was awarded the much coveted France literary Prix Goncourt for her novel "Les Bagages de Sable" (The Bagages of Sand), which depicts the story of a young Polish girl living alone with the ghosts of the memories of her family who died after deportation.

The novel by Gallimard was much praised by the critics when it was published last month in some 8,000 copies only.

Anna Langfus, who is Jewish of Polish origin, came to France as a refugee in 1946. She spent a year in Plock prison. In her first book, "Le Set et le Soufre," she recalled the tragic experience of the Nazi concentration camps and won the Prix Charles Veillon for it.

GERMANY

REPARATIONS TO VICTIMS OF NAZISM

Bonn, (JCNS) The Federal German Government regarded the reparation of Nazi wrongs as a "debt of honour" by the entire German people, Dr. Starke, the Bonn Minister of Finance, told Dr. Nahum Goldmann last week. He said he was speaking in the name of the entire Federal Cabinet and renewed the assurances he gave recenly in Parliament, to tackle the final phase of the indemnification programme with such a spirit.

Dr. Starke also informed Dr. Goldmann that the Federal Ministry of Finance was at present working out the necessary drafts of the final amendments to both the indemnification and restitution laws. He stressed his hope he would be able to discuss these drafts with Jewish representatives next January.

While no official estimates on the total sums involved by these amendments are as yet available, informed circles here believe it would require an additional payment of about 4,000,000,000 marks (about 1 billion dollars). Under current legislation another 6,000,000,000 marks are expected to be needed before the last 680,000 claims by Nazi victims, which so far have not yet been dealt with, are settled.

TRIAL OF FORMER SS OFFICER — CRACOW JEWS MASS MURDERER

Flensburg, (JCNS) The trial opened here of Martin Fellenz, aged 53, a former SS officer charged with responsibility for the murder of 40,000 Jews in the district of Cracow during the war.

CEMETERIES OF NAZI VICTIMS TO BE PROTECTED

BONN (JCNS). — The Federal German Minister of the Interior has decided to grant cemeteries of Nazi victims, mainly those at former Nazi concentration camps, the same protection as accorded by law to cemeteries of German soldiers and other victims of the Second World War, it was announced here.

In a letter to the Central Council of Jews in Germany, the Minister said that a new law was being prepared to this effect and would be presented soon to Parliament. Last May, the Central Council had called upon the Federal Government to grant such protection to all cemeteries of Nazi victims.

TURKEY

BASHKALE JEWS LEAVE TOWN

Istanbul, (JCNS) The Jews of the town of Bashkale, in Eastern Turkey, have started to sell their properties in advance of leaving the town. They are following the example of Mr. Sasson Yener and his family who left to settle temporarily in Istanbul after the kidnap of their 13-year-old daughter three months ago by a Moslem—Kurd who forced her to marry him. The Yeners have a son and two other daughters.

All interventions to have the kidnapped girl returned to her family have so far proved unsuccessful. The Moslem, Kemal Sakrak, a waiter, said he had papers signed by the girl's father giving his consent to the wedding. In fact, Mr. Yener was forced, at gun point, to sign such a document. He immediately reported the fact to Chief Rabbi David Asseo in Istanbul. An intervention in Ankara by the Chief Rabbi brought no success.

DATELINE: HAMILTON

AS I SEE IT

By PAUL HANOVER

Well I think I finally got my kid's Bar Mitzvah problem solved. He's so worried about not being prepared, I told him I'd get Murray Pomerantz to tape it, and he then could pantomine the whole Haftorah. Brilliant, eh what? This might open up a new field for professional cribbers. By the way, as you might well realize, it's utterly impossible for Helen and me to invite you all to the affair. So we've done the next best thing. We're having a city-wide mailing, announcing the address where you can send your gifts. Thank you.

Spent a little time listening to Sam Hebscher describing his trip to New York, then finally got around to asking him if he had seen the hit comedy: A Funny Thing Happened to Me On The Way To The Forum. "See it," gasped Sam," What for? Man, I live it every day!" Talking about the Forum, I'm surprised our government allowed the Russian hockey team to play there. One look at that place and those Russians would start sending US Care packages. That's quite a team those same Russians had. But let's face it, they love sports. They were playing hockey in Canada; starting to play ball in Cuba; and playing cat and mouse in Berlin.

I love people with this kind of sense-of-humor. We were walking around the Armouries with Theresa Nathan and her sister-in-law, Kate Taylor when Mrs. Nathan suddenly remembered her grandson had won a prize in the Anna Hershkowitz Chapter-sponsored baby photo contest. Kibbitzed Kate: Don't get excited. It doesn't mean a thing. Look at my Morton, he won one as a baby too!

Then there was the time when I complimented Rose Bader of the Jet restaurant on the way she'd helped the Nordeau Chapter organize the chicken dinner supper. "Thanks, but do you see that booth over there, the one that says Professor Andre, Palms Read. What we need, I sometimes feel, is one that promises, Have Your Head Read!" Yep. The gals sure do punish themselves. But the goal makes it worth while. Oh, there was only one incongruous note — that booth featuring Essex Packers Ham.

Another good week for cigars. One from Solly "By Golly" Adler. Number Four boy for them.... and yet another free puff from Leo Bornstein, a brand new papa also. And then there was Hy Rotman with a divorce. Hold on, though. This was a divorce from his partners in that auto parts manufacturing company they founded after their recent leave-taking of Nasco.... Do you want to know the real reason Castro let the missiles go from Cuba? Irving Zucker convinced him the sites would make good parking lots.... Well, anyhow, Saul Buchalter thought it was good enough for the column.

And this came from Toronto from the office of Jack Jacobson: A family endowement to perpetuate the memory of the late Louis and Sarah Rosenblood has been established at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem by their son, Arthur Rosenblood of Hamilton, to be known as The Arthur Rosenblood Family Endowment for Student Aid, School of Medicine, in memory of Louis and Sarah Rosenblood. The interest from this fund each year, in perpetuity, will be awarded to a worthy and needy student enrolled in this faculty. In announcing the establishment of the fund, Sydney Paikin, Q.C., Hamilton chairman of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, said, "Coming at this time, this generous contribution is especially significant for it represents the first family endowment to be established by a resident of Hamilton since the official launching of this program a few weeks ago. This program is designed to assure the university of future operating funds for assistance, while providing an opportunity for Canadians to perpetuate their family name, and to keep alive, always, the precious memories that make up the history of every family." Each year, forever, Mr. Rosenblood will be told the story of each benefiting student.

I used the press release, knowing Art's reticence about the spotlight. And, by coincidence, I received the release about the same time we heard Max Stein reminiscing about the scholarship fund Beth Jacob members had set up at the Theological Seminary in New York. No rubber bands on Hamilton bankrolls, eh what?

METRO TORONTO IN ELECTION BATTLE

SUMMERVILLE

SEES "INFLUENCE OF NEW CITIZENS"

Mayoralty candidate Donald D. Summerville expressed glowing praise for the interest that Canada's new citizens are taking in Toronto's civic elections and said he expected they would have a decisive influence on next Monday's results.

"I believe that the people who have come to join us from across the seas are showing a true sense of responsibility that could be an example for a large number of our native-born citizens," said Mr. Summerville as he made a final round of campaign speeches.

GIVENS - Leader In The Community

In the spring 1961, when Controller Philip G. Givens became president of the Toronto Zionist Council, the choice was hailed unanimously by all Zionists.

Mr. Givens, a native of the City of Toronto, graduated from the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall, and is a practising lawyer. He was elected Controller of the City of Toronto in 1960 for a two-year term. Previously he served as Alderman of the City Council of Toronto for nine years and was also a member of the Council of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto.

Phil, as he is known to his friends, presided over a number of major municipal committees, such as Traffic and Legislation Committee, Works Committee, Property Committee. the local Board of Health, and others.

Mr. Givens is a past president of the Toronto Metropolitan Council of B'nai B'rith and past president of the Upper Canada Lodge, B'nai B'rith, and also serves as a member of the Board of Governors of the New Mount Sinai Hospital and served on the Board of Trustees of Toronto General Hospital and the Board of Governors of Toronto Western Hospital.

Currently, Mr. Givens is a director of the Health League of Canada, a member of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, a member of the Toronto Board of Trade. He is also a member of the City of Toronto Planning Board and a Director of the North Toronto Memorial Gardens.

Since 1955 Mr. Givens has been a member of the National Executive Board of the Zionist Organization of Canada and has also chaired the National Committee on Tourism to Israel from 1956-1958. He has addressed many communities throughout Canada on behalf of the United Israel Appeal and the Zionist Educational Programme.

MURRAY CHUSID

COUNCIL CANDIDATE
WARD 5 (NORTH YORK)

MURRAY CHUSID, candidate for Council from Ward 5 is a successful 32 year old lawyer whose interest in community affairs is well-known throughout his Ward.

Mr. Chusid, together with his wife, Nita, both graduated in the same year from The University of Toronto.

Murray Chusid is also on the Executive of both the Reading Law Club and the United Jewish Welfare Leadership Development Committee.

Quite apart from the requirements of his own law practice, (his partners are Nathan M. Pivnick, Q.C. and Controller Philip G. Givens, Q.C.), Murray Chusid was one of the political party counsel with respect to the recent Ontario Crime Commission.

Mr. Chusid was born and raised in the City of Toronto and although he comes from a humble home, he has earned his own way through school including the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall. He has one brother, Sidney Chusid, who also resides with his family in Ward 5 and who carries on the practice of an Accountant.

BRUCE SABSAY

A candidate for Board of Education in North York's Ward 7 is promising more action and less stalling on some of the vital issues in the current educational system. Bruce Sabsay, a long time resident and homeowner in the Ward 7 area, is contesting the seat presently held by Mrs. I. Walker. Mr. Sabsay is a member of our community, and is fully aware of the many problems that face the people in the area.

CANDIDATE FOR REEVE OF NORTH YORK

Mr. James Service, well-known North York barrister.

CY TOWNSEND

Cy Townsend is 36 years of age, and served in the Canadian Army during the last war. He is married has two children, and his wife is active in community work. He is an experienced administrator, having a University background (Business Administration), and is executive director and general manager of a large insurance agency.

Mr. Townsend has resided in the area for over 15 years and, as a very active citizen in his community, has very definite views and objectives in improving the present administration.

Cy Townsend has worked hard in the community. Here is the record:

President, Humewood Ratepayers Association; President, Canadian Legion, Wingate Br.; Graduate University of New Brunswick (Business Administration); Fellow ... Insurance Institute of Canada; Executive Director, General Manager Insurance Organization; Board

Member, St. Clair Y.M.C.A.; Member "60" Club; Area Chairman, United Appeal; Active in Home & School Association; Member, York Safety Council (appointed by York Twp. Council).

He has been active in community work and was successful in solving many local problems in the Ward.

MRS. JOAN PASS

CANDIDATE FOR DEPUTY REEVE, WARD 1, YORK TOWNSHIP

To add colour and interest to her campaign for deputy reeve, Mrs. Pass is driving throughout the Ward 1 area in a pink striped jeep with a surrey top. As she walks throughout the residential areas, there are many children in line behind her intrigued by the jeep ... and ready to help her ring doorbells, and even act as interpreters in the homes where no English is spoken.

Mrs. Pass has spent ten years on various committees and organizations trying to better conditions within this Township. She has dealt with problems of zoning and planning, parks and playgrounds, traffic, parking and safety. This knowledge, together with the tax research work she did at Metro, will make her an able and capable representative for the ward.

The Hon. J. Keiller MacKay: Gov. Anderson of Minnesota: Rabbi Plaut: the Mayor. Mr. Phillips is honorary president of Holy Blossom Temple.

NORTH YORK'S POPULAR REEVE NORM GOODHEAD

North York Reeve Norman Goodhead stated that his first Metro task would be to put a motion before Metro Council requesting the Province to implement the Six Borough system. On the local scene the Reeve sees the continued improvement of local services as paramount on his list of progressive legislation for the coming year.

On the Six Borough system Reeve Goodhead stated that from personal experience, both in the municipality and on Metro, it is his firm conviction that a gradual approach to unification is the only logical course to take. "In large, constantly developing municipalities like North York," the Reeve stated, "it is of vital importance that local autonomy be maintained in order that an orderly progressive development may be assured. The knowledge and experience of local ratepayers places them in the best position to evaluate the pace and trend of development that they can best afford in the light of known circumstances of the times.

You simply, at this stage of development, cannot replace this proven method by substituting corps of professional managers and business administrators who are the backbone of any large complex of civic management. The larger the complex the more impossible does it become to translate the local needs of the electorate into planned courses of action. Until we begin to approach the point of full industrial development, which in turn will assure us of an adequate tax base from which to provide all the many local municipal services that modern communities demand, I am not prepared to turn over the management of our municipality to the super-complex mania that some amongst us would have us believe is the complete and final answer to all our problems. SIX BOROUGHS; LOCAL AUTONOMY; RETENTION OF PROVINCIAL GRANTS TO TOWNSHIPS; REPRESENTATION BY POPULATION; all these points are essential to the continued success of the Metro system, essential in my view if Metro is to continue to serve the best interests OF ALL ITS CITIZENS."

IRV PAISLEY

NORTH YORK'S FIGHTING COUNCILLOR

Mr. Paisley is one of the most popular community workers and councillors of North York.

Irv has been Councillor for Ward 6 for the past 5 terms, he was acclaimed at the last election.

- Community Centre for Lawrence Heights.
- Artificial Ice Rink and Change House for area.
- Underground Wiring in new subdivisions as well as long range program for elimination of existing overhead wires throughout the municipality.
- Storm sewers and curbs in Lawrence Manor and Viewmount areas.
- Sanitary sewers ... Ward Six is now completely sanitary sewered.
- Roads program ... Fought for the opening and improving of many new roads in Ward Six.
- Sidewalks ... Installation of sidewalks on Bathurst, Marlee, Caledonia Road, Ranee and Dufferin Streets.
- Drainage problems ... Personally inspected the inadequate drainage systems throughout the ward and helped alleviate many of the drainage problems.
- Lights ... Ward Six is completely lighted.
- Parks improvement ... Worked unstintingly on behalf of mothers and children in the area for the improvement of Dell Park, Joyce Parkway, Wenderley, Hillmount, Lawrence Heights, as well as other parks in the area.
- Assisted in solving many traffic problems.
- Complete library service for the ward.
- Formulated public opinion and representation which resulted in an early decision to develop Spadina Road Expressway to N.Y.
- Swimming pool for community.
- Plebiscite for extension of Municipal Franchise to all citizens over 21.

TORONTO UJWF ANNIVERSARY

SADOWSKI AWARD FOR GRANATSTEIN

Mr. Granatstein has, in recent years, been primarily associated with the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association, serving as President from 1956-1962 and is at present the Chairman of the Board. During his term of office, the Northern "Y" building was planned and constructed.

Mr. Granatstein became active in the "Y" in the mid-40's when he was a leader in the development of the Spadina-Bloor building.

But this is not the complete story of his contribution to the general welfare of the community.

Mr. Granatstein was chairman of the United Jewish Welfare Fund campaign in 1945 and is currently a member of the Executive Committee of the UJWF. He is also a member of the organizing committee and first chairman of the Administrative Committee of the United Jewish Appeal. He is on the Board of Directors of the New Mount Sinai Hospital, and on the Board of Directors and Executive Committee of the Jewish Home for the Aged; a founder of the Jewish Camp Council; a member of the National Executive of the Canadian Jewish Congress; Social Planning Council of the City of Toronto; and has participated in the fund-raising activities of the United Appeal for the City of Toronto.

Mr. Granatstein is presently a leading figure in the planning and formation of the National Council of YM-YWHA's for Canada.

AWARD TO DR. HALBERT

The selection of Dr. Halbert for this Award was made by the Executive Committee of the Young Leadership Development Program and will be presented during the UJWF 25th Anniversary Meeting on December 4th.

Dr. Halbert will receive the award for outstanding service and commitment to the community. The Welfare Fund established this award in recognition of the importance in a community to encourage, stimulate and prepare young men for leadership in the community.

Dr. Halbert is a graduate of the Universities of Toronto and Illinois and is a practising Orthodontist. In 1960 he visited Europe and Israel as a member of the United Jewish Appeal Study Mission; subsequently he has been active in the UJA Campaign; and in 1963 will serve as Chairman of the Dental Group.

He is a member of the Executive of the Leadership Development Program and recently delivered a paper on Leadership Development at the General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds in Philadelphia.

FLORENCE HUTNER TO REVIEW 25 YRS ACTIVITY

The report by Miss Florence Hutner, Executive Vice-President, will trace the history of the Welfare Fund from 1937, the year of its formation, to the present day, by describing the development of the Welfare Fund's programs of health and welfare services and their relationship to the growing Jewish Community of Toronto.

The report will be supplemented by a dramatic presentation, written by Ben Lappin, and featuring Murray Davis, founder and resident producer of the Crest Theatre. Assisting in the presentation will be Bernard C. Kurtz, Morley Pape and Henry B. Sussman.

The Nominations Committee, chaired by Meyer W. Gasner, will submit to the Annual Meeting the nominations for Officers and members of the Board of Directors for 1962-63.

Mr. Sable announced that the invitation to participate in the 25th Anniversary Meeting of the Welfare Fund and to help celebrate this significant event in the growth and development of the community has been extended to the entire community.
